NEJM Group Launches NEJM Resident 360 to Best Serve the Needs of Medical Residents

BOSTON — NEJM Group announces the launch of NEJM Resident 360, a website and discussion platform that supports medical residents with the essential information they need to successfully and confidently navigate residency and beyond.

“We want to provide the next generation of physicians with better tools to efficiently manage their training years,” said Dr. Jeffrey Drazen, M.D., Editor-in-Chief, NEJM Group and the New England Journal of Medicine. “They need a trusted place to turn. NEJM Resident 360 is that place.”

NEJM Resident 360 offers clinical content targeted specifically to residents’ needs, guidance in career decisions, and a way to connect with peers.

- Rotation Prep helps residents solidify their foundational medical knowledge with materials that have been written and curated by a team of physician experts, fellows, and residents, and mapped to 14 common residency rotations in internal medicine. Each rotation includes brief topic overviews, links to landmark clinical trials and review articles from NEJM and other highly-respected sources, and a selection of test questions from NEJM Knowledge+.
- Learning Lab provides further educational and interactive tools that explain the medical literature and hone diagnostic skills.
- Resident Lounge and Career sections feature resources that address social pressures and aim to inspire and assist with professional growth, including podcasts, blog posts, and professional articles.
- Discussions engage residents with experts and one another on a variety of clinical, career, and resident life topics.

Access to NEJM Resident 360 starts with the creation of a user profile; access to Rotation Prep is a benefit for individual subscribers to any NEJM Group product and for institutional site license customers.
